Foreword

The Senior Class of the Hakarua High School takes great pleasure in presenting to you, our friends and school-mates, this number of the "Hakadee". We realize that we are not skilled in the art of book-making, but we have striven to overcome these difficulties and have tried to make this book a success.

Within these covers are many attractions. Familiar faces smile at you, the literary achievements are from the pen of our fellow classmates, the calendar is a reminder of our days spent in this Land of Learning, the jokes, athletics, alumni directory we hope will prove very interesting to you.

As you turn these pages we hope that you will overlook the minor imperfections and have only pleasant recollections of the class of '28.

Dedicatory

We, the Senior Class of '28, do dedicate this fourth edition of the "Wakadee" to all those who have been factors in producing this annual. Especially to Mr. Sipe, who has been our sponsor for the past two years, and has faithfully helped us through hardships in time of need. Also to our parents who have sacrificed time and labor for our sakes.

History of the Wakarusa High School

The Wakarusa High School was organized in the fall of 1894 by F. T. Atkinson, who took charge of our school at that time. The organizing was a difficult task as the school was not properly graded, and for several years a number of high school subjects had been taught. But Mr. Atkinson proved equal to the task and the students were classified and the work arranged in accordance with the state course of study.

Our high school was organized as a township school under the management of Jacob H. Dell, trustee. After six years it was taken over by the town and controlled by a school board until the spring of 1923, when it again became a township school.

In the summer of 1894 the old building was remodeled and the west wing-added. In 1914 it was again reconstructed, made more comfortable and modern and was used ten years longer. As the attendance increased the old building became inadequate, unsafe and unsanitary and was finally condemned by the State Health Department. Steps were then taken to secure a new building and in 1924 and 1925 the present modern and beautiful building was constructed.

Our school has been served by able principals and instructors, among them are: W. H. Sims, Willard Miller, A. C. Steele, L. M. Culp, W. H. Sunthimer, and at present C. J. Gerber. From time to time the curriculum has been enlarged and members added to the faculty. This year our high school faculty numbers nine.

In 1913 the vocational subjects of Home Economics and Manual Training were discontinued in the old building because of lack of facilities for teaching them. In the fall of 1925 this department was again organized and has proved quite popular with the boys. In 1925 a Commercial Course including bookkeeping, typewriting, and shorthand was added. This year instruction in Bible and orchestra work has all been given.

Our enrollment this year has been 132.

S WE, the Senior Class of 1928, entered the old Waukarusa High School, we looked forward to but a short time till we would be in a new building. To organize our class known as Freshmen, we started out by choosing the following officers: President, Harley Stump; Vice-President, Gerald Hunsberger; Secretary, Pearl Hahn; Treasurer, Florence Shank; Sponsor, Miss Litweiler.

Advancing one step, we found ourselves Sophomores. Taking our class roll into consideration, it was diminished by four students. To start the class over, we selected our class officers as follows: President, Pearl Hahn; Vice-President, Florence Shank; Treasurer, Harley Stump; Sponsor, Mr. Gerber.

As we became more interested in our class work, we selected green and white for our class colors, white La France rose as our class rose, and, "Non palma sine labore" to be our motto. Our pennant was also placed on the gymnasium wall this year.

Finding ourselves Juniors, the remaining class of twenty elected the following class officers: President, Harold Pletcher; Vice-President, Morris Hartman; Secretary, Pearl Hahn; Treasurer, Mary Longenecker; Sponsor, Mr. Sipe. January 21 and 22, the play "Yimmie Yonson's Yob," a comedy, was put on and made a success.

Entering our final class, eighteen classmates rejoined and elected class officers as follows: President, Harold Pletcher; Vice-President, Harley Stump; Secretary, Mary Longenecker; Treasurer, Dorothy Detwiler; Sponsor, Mr. Sipe. Counting ourselves as Seniors, we put on the play, "And Home Came Ted" which was a success.

Now as we conclude our four-year journey, we are ready to step out into the "World of Occupations." Each one strove to make his mark in the "Land of Knowledge" and hopes to meet with the same success in later life.

Delusion

HE ride was long from Morall City to Dones Hill, Colorado. It was a day when the barometer read high. You could almost hear things calling for rain, very dry, typical of that part of the United States.

A line of sunshine struck here and there as the long journey came to a close. The passengers alighted from their crouched position in the overcrowded bus. There was a warm wind saturated with fine, sifting, grains of sand which stung the faces of the passengers.

A young man of about twenty-one years, strangely different, who would have aroused the attention of any casual observer, was of medium proportions, rather tall, stern blue eyes, and a carriage that spoke aloud, possessed the attitude of one who knows how to mind his own business. A rare quality for modern times.

A lady came down the the walk and wished to turn, he immediately stopped, let the lady pass and went on his way.

James Berditt was returning from Morall City. He had acquired a definite degree of success in his vocation as an accountant at that early period in manhood. Due to his father's financial condition he had no choice, but was obliged to work, this was all the more cause for his perfect motto which he strongly upheld, "No victory without labor."

He was coming to the home of his future bride, with whom his marriage was to be on the following Friday, June the thirteenth. His mind was revolving with the picture of her, Frances White, his ideal, rather tall and slender, yet no frivolous air, black wavy hair, dark piercing eyes that looked into your very soul, yet extremely lovely in a perfectly shaped head upon well rounded neck and shoulders. She was far superior to the many girls and ladies working in banks and offices where his work required him to go.

She was a stenographer and had so perfect a record, parallel to her character that anyone had good reason to be proud of, she only gave the slightest sign of attention.

Young Berditt and she had been the best of friends for nearly five years, ever since in their high school years, and now they were about to be married.

Berditt had not been to see her for about five weeks, but his mind was continually upon her, when not to detract from his duties, in its fullest idea of attainment. He realized, were it not for that deep smouldering love this world certainly would be a cold and indifferent one.

He could hardly wait until he should press his lips to hers in that divine essence and once more have her in his arms.

Berditt swung into a taxi and directed the driver. In a few minutes that seemed an age to him, they came to a stop in front of a large stately house. He leaped out, with such alertness that told of his ability as an athlete, ran up the steps as was his custom, opened the door and presented himself.

Instead of his Frances, as he saw her in his mind continually, she was strangely different, her black eyes didn't light up as he knew they would if prompted by that divine instinct of love as they always did on their meetings before this one. He glanced at the photos in richly designed folders on the piano. His eyes rested for only the slightest fraction of a second on one strangely new. There to his utter disgust and amazement, of another man—a delusion, the demon of deceit.

The proud carriage that had been in him since the first evidences of their love for one another in their high school days and the main factor with which he acquired success in the business world, dropped.

A thousand impulses rushed across his mind, concluding with two famous lines by Tennyson. "Tis better to have loved and lost, than never to have loved at all."

Myron Weldy.

Class Song

Oh, what can we say of the future?
What can we say of our dream?
We must on to the tasks that before us
Call us to follow the gleam!

Oh, then when at last we have conquered
What shall we say of our dream?
We'll give thanks that our dear Alma Mater
Taught us to follow the gleam!

Chorus:

Fare thee well dear old school
Alma Mater so dear
We must list to the world that doth call,
We must on to the work that before us doth lie
For there's work in the world for us all.
Let us strive for success in this work-a-day land
For our class and school we all love
Then at last we may hear the sweet praise of "well done"
From the school that was ever so dear.

Class Grumble

LAST YEAR course of four years the Seniors have found many pleasing things, but some not so pleasing. Life may be a bed of roses sometimes, every flower that's bound to prick hard; it may offer us many a huge doughnut, but there's sure to be a big hole in the center of each one; and the worm of dissatisfaction and discontent hides in the heart of the reddest apple to gnaw its life away. It's all right to be an optimist, if you don't let it strike in deep enough to become dangerous; but it sets one's teeth on edge to have a really delightful grouch, and then run up squarely against "the smile that won't come off" and not be able to produce an antidote.

I'm here to tell you that there's a cloud behind every sunbeam. We looked dreadfully wise and charming, all spread out here for your inspection, but if you could get one peep at us behind the scenes, you might form an altogether different opinion than the admiring one you now hold.

To tell you of our successes of our past four years, nobody has much to say about the failures, the hard work, the report cards with their bad marks we had to take home. Even some of the faculty do not give their highest respect for the class. All that, our wise boys and girls have passed over in discreet silence.

A Senior is universally recognized as a creature of lofty and wonderful dignity. Why won't people respect it? Why, the Juniors and even the Sophomores have dared to sit in our presence and did not remove their hats. The Freshmen have never failed to tiptoe by with frightened faces, and trembling limbs, and this helped to soothe our wounded vanity to some extent. Again the Juniors and Sophomores do not respect the Seniors because they think they are a little more, as they talk and make fun of the Seniors.

As you all know every class has their ups and downs, and this is the way it went with us. When we were Freshmen we lived in constant fear of every other class in the school, especially the heartless and unfeeling Sophomores. But when we became Sophs we were the same way. As Juniors, we felt it our duty to hold up our rights and maintain our dignity before the lower classes. At last, we as Seniors of Wakarusa High School seem to have this year become as obsolete words, and stricken from the vocabulary, of the faculty altogether.

We have petitioned for many favors that have not always been treated with proper degree of respect. For example, we have asked to go to Studebakers for the last six months and the teacher said, "Yes, we will go after we get through with our text book in Physics, and in Economics." The teacher said, "We will go to a trial," but I think we won't get to go to any because there isn't any trial going on that suits the teacher.

Some of our teachers have been caught smiling—slyly, of course at some failure we have made in improper expression, to the wisdom and dignity that is ours. For example, in a history class, a student was asked how iron was discovered, and the student said, "They smelt it."

A student was asked in a class what was the first animal domesticated? The student replied, "The monkey."

The teacher said, "Let's not have baboons talk about monkeys."

One of the teachers asked who was President of the U. S. when the cotton gin was discovered, and the student answered, "Coolidge."

We can bear much. We feel that we have borne more than the average mortal is ever called upon to endure. But this is the last straw. The camel's back is broken. We can smile no more. We can only go on record as having registered this complaint and with the wish that we may be remembered throughout the years as having given expression to the standing "grouch" we will yet be nursing in the depths of our hearts.

Albert Canen.

Our Class

We love to talk of the many names
Which swiftly come and pass.
But most of all we love to talk,
Of the one dear name, Our Class.

We strove from start to finish
To do our studies as best we knew.
And now we hope that you'll consider,
And help us with our tasks to do.

We've tried to live our colors.
We've tried our honesty to show,
And hope that in the future
We'll hold ideals high, not low.

We do not ask, for false glory,
Or anything we did not earn
But we're willing now to grasp,
The many things, which are yet to learn.

Our Class has many brilliant minds
Which in the future we hope will show
By standing up for all that's right
And virtues that shine and glow.

And now as our final message.
We bid you all farewell
We hope that in the future
Our message you will tell.

Harry Hochstetler.

Class Prophecy

IT WAS the night of the commencement which each student had looked forward to for four years, but now that the time had come all seemed to dread the thought of separation. There was music, a fine lecture from a gifted speaker, the presentation of diplomas, and the closing exercises of the program and then the parting of old friends. Many of us had unfinished and hazy plans for the future. I was among that number. Time passed on from that memorable night and almost before I knew it I was out of school five years. During this period I had been a college student. Then one day I decided to go to England and enter Oxford University.

Preparations were made accordingly and one fine day I bade farewell to my homeland and set sail from New York harbor. I was on the ship several days when one morning a small island was seen in the distance. The captain said he also saw a large black object coming toward the ship. The people were terrified as it came closer and closer, and then we heard someone scream, "A whale." The ship was turned over. Somehow I landed on the whale's back and he swam towards the shore. As he was near the island he gave a quick turn and I slid off of his back into the water. I soon was on the island which I learned was very small and had no inhabitants. There I lived for several years on mushrooms and puffballs, which Mr. Gerber had told of in Botany but which we had laughed at the idea of eating.

One day an airplane was forced to land on the island for want of water. The pilot I recognized as Mr. Sipe, who was on a trip around the world. I asked him what became of the remainder of the class and he said he did not know what did happen to all of them but that there were a few in Wakarusa. He had been in Europe for several years.

Mr. Sipe said his next stop was to be in United States and I should go along. We soon landed at Washington, D. C. The next day I started for Wakarusa. When I arrived at the station I could scarcely believe my eyes for there was a great large station and everything had changed so. The town did not look at all like it did when I left it. I started down the street from the station and was in front of a large theater, which was playing "Class of '28." Curiously enough I entered and the show started with the picture of the United States Capitol, and entering the Capitol was seen Harold Fletcher who has been president of the class, who was now president of the United States.

Next was a picture of a room in a hospital. The door opened and Pearl Hahn entered. She had taken a training course in nursing at Elkhart. Next she was seen entering a train, which took her to St. Louis, Missouri, where she had a position in a large hospital.

The scene then changed to a small store and behind the counter was Arden Stroup. Next was a picture of large grocery stores all over the United States which were called "Stroup's Chain Grocery Stores."

The screen then showed a large building in Paris to which the people on the street seemed to be flocking. On entering the building the curtain was soon raised and on the stage was seen Harley Stump, soloist, accompanied by his wife, Mary Longenecker, the World's Greatest Pianist. They were making a tour around the world.

After that scene a small shop appeared on the screen. On the window was written "Men's Hair Dressing Parlor," below the sign was "Hair guaranteed to be wavy after the famous salt water treatment." Inside of the shop was seen Maynard Yoder, who had discovered a treatment which would make any kind of hair wavy.

Then the scene changed to a large library in Chicago. One of the shelves had several books which were called "Hostetler's Works." The picture of Harry Hostetler was shown to be on the frontispiece, and leafing through the book were poems which were widely known.

The scene immediately changed to London where Florence Blocher was attending an art institution, then changed back to New Orleans, where Florence was seen in an art studio in which were many pieces of beautiful art.

Next the scene changed to a large school building in South Bend in the art room was seen a large group of negro students with Mary Lienhart as instructor.

There was a flickering, then appeared a small school building in Africa and in front of the small group of children was Albert Canen, who had made a great success at teaching the heathen.

After the school room disappeared a stage of a theater in London appeared and one of the actresses I recognized as Matilda Fish.

The next scene was of a green valley in Colorado. In the center of the valley was a small house and on the side of the hill was a herd of cattle. Near the cattle under a tree was seen Ivan Culp and Morris Hartman with their faithful friend Fido, their dog. The men seemed to be troubled. They had found the burial place of an Indian who had a large amount of gold buried with him. They were planning what they would do with the gold.

The scene then changed to Cleveland, Ohio, to a large manufacturing plant, in the office were seen Myron and Virgil Weldy who had made an invention in airplanes. Then there was seen an airplane going across the ocean which soon dropped into the water. The airplane could then be used as a motor boat.

Class Will

We, the members of the Class of 1928, being of sound mind and excellent judgment, realizing that our time of departure is at hand, do hereby present our last will and testament.

ARTICLE I

Item 1. We bequeath to the Juniors our cherished seats in the assembly.

Item 2. To the Sophomores, we bequeath the scholarly dignity we Seniors have always possessed.

Item 3. To the Freshmen, we bequeath our sympathy for their next three years in W. H. S.

Item 4. To the school as a whole, we set aside one hundred dollars ($100) and Harold Pletcher as the engineer and contractor to construct a special room to be used by Cupid's couples, only so they will not loaf in the vestibule.

Junior Class History

THE first day of school in September, 1925, found us at the school building filled with excitement, because of many strange faces and new surroundings. We finally gained enough courage to call a class meeting and we elected the following officers: Sponsor, Miss Searer; President, Thomas Pletcher; Vice-President, Calvin Mishler; Treasurer, Katherine Lehman; Secretary, Juanita Christner.

We chose for our class colors crimson and gold, and the American Beauty rose as our flower.

September a year later found most of us back at school once more. We were not long in organizing this year, and elected the following officers: Sponsor, Mr. C. J. Gerber; President, Katherine Lehman; Vice-President, Claude Robinson; Secretary, Grace Bowers; Treasurer, Lowell Sloat.

Again the next year in September found us back as Juniors more than ever determined to surpass the standard set by the former classes. As Freshmen there were forty-three of us, but now only twenty-six of us returned.

We again called a class meeting and elected the following officers: Sponsor, Mr. C. J. Gerber; President, Lowell Sloat; Vice-President, Katherine Lehman; Secretary-Treasurer, Grace Bowers.

On Friday and Saturday nights, January 20 and 21, eleven of our members put on the play "Why Not Jerry" which was a great success.

In March the Juniors entertained the Seniors and the Faculty. An enjoyable evening was spent together.

Show Night in Guys Mills

The small village of Guy Mills that nestled among the mountains of West Virginia was in an uproar. An "Uncle Tom's Cabin" show was coming. Because of the isolated position of the village this was an event to be reckoned with. The bills that had been distributed described the company as the greatest company ever assembled under one tent. Two bloodhounds, a waterproof tent, and enough scenery to make change for every act, completed the equipment.

The company came on Friday morning. They were to give the show that night. Much discussion arose among the villagers as how the tent was to be erected. Despite the advice of the village "know all" the tent was erected in the usual manner by the help of a few village boys.

Finally night came. It was a perfect June night, the moon and the stars illuminated the surrounding countryside beautifully. Many a lover's heart missed a beat when they looked at the moon. A perfect evening seemed to be in store for everyone. A large, gray, somber mass of clouds were lurking in the west, however, that boded no good for anybody.

Back of the scenes the manager was preparing for the evening's performance. He said to Pete his right-hand man.

"Pete, you see if you can pep up those dogs of ours. They won't even run on the stage any more."

"Yep," came the laconic answer and Pete left the dogs.

Eleanor Watson was then sought by the manager. She played Eva in the cast. Finally he found her.

"Ellie," he said.

"Yes," she replied.

"Tonight I want none of your usual foolishness. Act as if you really mean it."

"Why?"

"Well, I have a hunch that something is going to happen to us to-night that will make fools of us around here."

With this prophecy he left to make further preparation.

Finally the show started. The clouds in the west had now advanced menacingly. Everything went nicely until Eliza made her flight across the ice and then the manager's prophecy started to come true. Eliza was about one third of the way across the stage when the dogs and Legree started after her. Instead of the usual slowness of the dogs, they sniffed a little bit and started in mass for the other side of the stage. Eliza stepped in front of one of them and she was sent sprawling on the floor. The dogs were gone before Eliza collected herself. She left the stage in a fit of mortification. This brought a roar of laughter from the audience and cause a chilly feeling to overtake the manager.

The cause for this display of speed and energy was simple. Pete had dragged a piece of meat across the stage and left it lay on the other side of the stage. Since the dogs were not overfed, they simply went after the eats.

The clouds in the west had advanced now until the moon was obscured at times. Inside the tent the show was progressing merrily. Every one was ignorant of the fact that a storm was inevitable.

Suddenly the storm broke out. It came with all its fury at the first blast. The force of the storm was terrific, trees moaned as they swayed in the wind and a general assortment of odd noise invaded the countryside. Rain descended in torrents and the waterproof tent turned out to be not quite so waterproof after all.

Everyone inside the tent was now nervous and excited. The water came through the canvas easily and the center pole creaked forebodingly. The manager tried to quiet the people, but he was of no avail. Everybody was expecting the worst. A few braved the storm, but they came back.

Then it happened. Softened by the water, the stakes that held the west side of the tent loosened, and the wind did the rest. If the people had been in a state of disorder before they were now in a state of chaos. Rain blew in the side that had blown in, finishing the task of wetting proclaiming that the leaky tent had not quite done to a turn yet. Some one raised a voice that the manager should be punished, but when the crowd looked for him, they saw that he and the rest of the company had retired to their wagons when everyone was excited, as if they knew what was to happen.

As suddenly as the storm had started it abated. The wind stopped blowing, settling down to a normal breeze and the rain stopped completely. The canvas on the side of tent had blown in now flapped contentedly in the breeze. The moon came out again also and everyone grinned sheepishly and went home, some vowing that they would have revenge.

The next morning the company left among the peers of the villagers.

Sophomore Class History

Fifty-nine ambitious boys and girls entered the Wakarusa High School in September, 1926, to begin their exciting career as Freshmen. The class organized and elected the following officers: President, Charles Myers; Vice-President, Cecil Weaver; Secretary and Treasurer, Robert Lehman. We chose blue and white for our class colors. We were so exceedingly devoted to our studies that two parties held at the schoolhouse comprised our only social activities. Miss Brevier was sponsor.

This our second year, we number forty-six. At our first class meeting we elected Robert Lehman, president; Cecil Weaver, vice-president; and Irma Shank, secretary and treasurer; Mr. Rohrer as sponsor. Although our number is reduced, our energy and thirst for knowledge remains unabated. No other class has members so tall, so short, so thin, or so fat as some of ours. We have enjoyed two social events this year and each was declared a huge success by all.

A Forest Fire

It was late on a summer evening, and the fleecy clouds above were all ablaze with the last rays of the setting sun. Softly on the summer's breeze came the soft clip-clop of a horse's hoofs. Presently, around a bend in the trail appeared a lone horseman, who bore the unmistakable evidence of a long tiresome journey over mountain and on the prairie. As the rider paused, he heard the singing gurgle of a dashing brook as it leaped from rock to rock to a small pool which lay at the base of a huge boulder under which it disappeared.

Wearily Jim Steele dismounted, took the saddle off from his horse and let him run at will.

Steele was a young man who appeared to be about twenty-five years old. He was tall, slender, and powerfully built, with shoulders that denoted an abundance of reserve strength. His face, though rugged from being exposed to the weather, was not far from handsome. His eyes shot forth a glance of defiance to the whole world. Ends of dark chestnut brown hair stuck out below his large ten-gallon hat. He wore thick corduroy pants with a flannel checked shirt. On his feet he had soft leather boots. All this and his easy swinging walk easily gave him away as a United States Forest Ranger.

After he had completed his evening work about camp he rolled up in his blankets and slept.

Faintly on the summer breeze came an odor which struck terror in man and beast on prairie or in the forest.

Tony, the trained horse of the ranger, became nervous. He began to walk in circles about his sleeping master, stopping now and then to gaze off in the northwest. The odor became stronger and in the distance could be heard a dull roar. Tony began nuzzling his master in an effort to arouse him.

Steele awoke with a start and then the danger dawned upon him. He threw the blankets from himself and leaped to his feet. As he took in the situation, he quickly saddled his horse and gathering up his camp kit placed it back of the saddle. The east was just being tinged by the first rays of dawn.

To the northwest the sky was all aglow with the light of a forest fire as it swept through the forest drawing nearer and nearer.

Steele knew that in the path of the advancing danger lay the cabin of an old miner who lived with his twenty year old daughter. Throwing himself into the saddle Steele spurred Tony into a run down the steep mountain path to the plain below that was lighted by the reflection of the fire. As he thundered down the trail his mind was busy. During the three years of service as a ranger he had often stopped at this cabin to refresh himself and visit with old man Gray and his daughter Mildred. So he must warn them if it cost him his life.

He urged Tony on as fast as he dared. As he neared the cabin he could see the girl as she ran out of the house. Apparently she had just discovered her danger. At the same time she saw the approaching rider. As he drew near she recognized her old friend and admirer, Jim Steele. As he slid Tony to a halt Mildred Gray ran breathlessly to him. "Oh, Jim," she cried, "Father went to the village yesterday and did not return last night. Can you help me to the village?"

Quickly they were both on Tony's back, hurrying as fast as possible for the village. Smoke now filled the air as the fire was approaching rapidly. As they came to the wagon road that led to the village, Jim saw they could not make it. The fire was just a short distance behind them. Calling Tony to a halt he jumped off and started clearing the grass off a small space of ground. Soon he had a space large enough so that they could stand in the center. Then taking a match from his pocket he lit the grass on all sides. Soon the fire passed by them and they rode into the village where they were protected from forest fires.

Days went on and the following spring as the grass was coming out nice and green Jim Steele and Mildred Gray were married and then went to live in the cabin where the brook goes dashing by.

The Psalm of Geometry

Mr. Bowers is my teacher, I shall not pass,
He maketh me to prove dense propositions,
He leadeth me to expose my ignorance before the class,
He maketh me draw figures on the board for my grade's sake,
Yea, though I study till midnight,
I shall gain no Geometry.
The propositions bother me, and the originals sorely trouble me;
He prepareth puzzles for me in the presence of mine enemies,
He giveth me a low grade, my work runneth under,
Surely zero and condition shall follow me all the days of my life;
And I shall dwell in the class of Geometry forever.

Life

What's life? A story or a song;
A race on any track;
A gay adventure, short or long,
A puzzling nut to crack;
A grinding task; a pleasant stroll;
A climb; a slide down hill;
A constant striving for a goal;
A cake; a bitter pill;
A pit where fortune flouts or stings;
A playground full of fun;—
With many any of these things;
With others all in one.

What's life? To love the things we see;
The hills that touch the skies;
The smiling sea; the laughing lea;
The light in woman's eyes;
To work and love the work we do;
To play a game that's square;
To grin a bit when feeling blue;
With friends our joys to share;
To smile, though games be lost or won;
To earn our daily bread;—
And when at last the day is done
To tumble into bed.

Freshmen Class History

After purchasing our supplies for a long journey we took our place in the great air-ship, the Spirit of '27, with Miss Brevier as navigator, Luther Hartman as aviator, and Marjorie Brown as "relief" pilot.

After idling the engines for some time the pilot opened the throttle. Down the runway the great plane sped and slowly, steadily, the ship climbed into the air. We were on our way following the "Great Circle" of Education.

When some hours out, we encountered fog banks of English and Arithmetic, which were so dense that we sought the safety of an altitude higher than "C-."

As time passed we ran into new difficulties including Exams, which were the supreme tests. Three of our passengers had already given up hope of success but the rest were still hopeful, and soon we reached clear weather.

Gradually the shore line of Knowledge appeared and we glided downward onto the field of Vacation.

Ted's Lesson

TED stood gloomily looking out the window. He was wondering if he would ever get out of his latest scrape. He knew that it would take quite a sum of money this time, and his father had refused to pay any more college debts. Indeed, he refused so emphatically that Ted ran into the hall door and had a perfectly good black eye as the result of trying to avoid close contact with his paternal ancestor's boot.

Mr. Ridgeway, Ted's father, was a millionaire, and although he gave Ted a generous allowance, it did not last Ted two weeks. It was the usual story of college and hilarious parties, in which Ted was one of the leaders. At one of these parties, Ted had become a trifle too hilarious, and on the way home he was none too steady and as his car was weaving in the street, he ran over a young girl. She was very seriously injured, and Ted was afraid of a lawsuit. He knew that if he was involved in a lawsuit, it would cost them an enormous sum of money, for it was entirely his fault that the girl was injured. This had happened a week ago and he had heard no word from the relatives of the girl.

Ted's first thought was to call the hospital to find out the condition of the girl but decided to see his lawyer before he took any definite steps.

He ran out to the garage and jumped into his roadster and started in the direction of his lawyer's, Mr. Wainscott offices. On the way he narrowly avoided running over a pedestrian. From then on he decided he had better slow down. As he drew up before Mr. Wainscott's offices, he noticed the injured girl's father walking slowly past the building. Ted hastily averted his face, for he did not want to be recognized just then. He drove around the block and came back and went into the building.

There he had a short interview with Mr. Wainscott, who advised him to await developments. He promised Ted to see the girl and try to buy her off, in other words, try and hush the matter up. Now right at this time of the year was Mr. Wainscott's busiest period. After interviewing Ted, he neglected to take down any notes of the case, and promptly forgot about Ted.

About two days later, Ted was anxious to know how affairs were going, and to see if his lawyer and the Dawsons had come to an agreement of some sort. Therefore he sought Mr. Wainscott to find out, but his secretary said he was too busy to see Ted that day, but he might come the next day. The next day Ted went again, but he was disappointed again. Day after day Ted came and went with almost clock-like regularity, but still he did not see Mr. Wainscott.

Finally Ted decided to go to see the Dawsons himself. As he reflected on this, he thought he had better take some money as a pacifier. He crept stealthily to the door of his room and looked up and down the hall, and to his relief, it was empty. He tiptoed down the hall, slid down the bannisters and entered the library as quietly as he could.

There he went to one side of the room where a rich tapestry hung. This he drew aside, touched a button and watched a panel slide slowly to one side. For a moment he was tempted to leave the money, but stifling the cries of his conscience, he quickly twirled the knob a few times and the door flew open. He reached into the safe and drew out some bundles of money. He counted out several thousand dollars worth of bonds. He was about to close the door of the safe, thought better of it and took two more bundles.

"The old boy won't miss any of it, anyway," he muttered, as he closed the safe, pulled the panel into place, and dropped the tapestry over it. He disposed of the money in his capacious coat pocket and went out to his car and drove away.

He drove to the hospital, parked his car in an inconspicuous place, and asked the nurse in charge if he could see the girl. He was admitted to the girl's room, where he saw several persons seated around the girl's bed. He learned later that they were the girl's parents and her brother and sister. He inquired about the condition of the girl and was told that she was much improved. After an hour or so of talking about commonplace matters, he broached the subject of the accident and asked if they were going to sue him for damages. He was haughtily informed that they were not going to sue him at all, and that they would not think of dragging their honorable name through any mud, as would happen if they sued him. He was told that their name was spotless and would remain so as long as they lived.

Ted was dismissed and was soon racing home to replace the money he had so needlessly stolen. He had time to replace the money before his father came home. Ted had learned his lesson and he resolved to go straight from then on, and he did. He became a dutiful and model son though his parents could never understand why!

FRESHMAN CLASS PARTY

The Freshmen held their first class party October 12 at the home of Veryl Hostetler. They left Wakarusa at 5:30, and in a short time reached their destination. It was a beautiful moonlight night and all of the group walked down a pretty lane to the edge of a creek. Soon a big roaring bonfire was built by the boys.

The refreshments were weinies, marshmallows, olives, pickles, etc.

A number of games were played after the eats. Although not all the members of the class were present those who were there reported a fine time.

FRESHMAN PARTY

The Freshmen held their second class party at the schoolhouse on February 10, 1928.

The refreshments were sandwiches, olives, pickles, bananas, apples, and hot chocolate. After the eats the entertainment committee had contests and games for us.

All of the class were not present, and those that were not there surely missed a fine time.

A MODERN EVE

One of our pretty Sophomore girls, wearing the very latest in bathing suits, was sitting on the beach when a young man approached her and took off his hat, remarking that it was a fine day.

"How dare you speak to me"? said the girl indignantly, "I don't know you from Adam."

"Well," returned the young man unconcernedly, "I would hardly have known you from Eve."

Beauty

Beautiful sun, that doth give us light;
Beautiful moon, that doth shine in the night
Beautiful stars in the heavens so high;
Shining with radiant light in the sky.

Beautiful rivers, so blue and so clear;
Beautiful sound of its billows we hear;
Beautiful flowers that bloom at our feet,
Smelling so fragrant and also so sweet.

Beautiful springtime, then all is delight;
Beautiful summer, so warm and bright;
Beautiful autumn, with fruit and grain;
Beautiful winter, with snowflakes again.

Painter of Memories

Painter of Memories, come my way
I have some Mem'ries for you today;
Bring your brush and your palette, too
For I have something for you to do.

Painter of Memories, paint I pray
Of a little old cottage far away
Amid the blossoms of early June
With the robin singing her loveliest tune,

With your gayest colors paint the flowers
That grew around that home of ours,
And don't forget the azure hue
For there the skies were always blue.

The rippling brooks and the swimming pool
With its sandy shores and shade trees cool,
Will all be brought right back to me
By you, oh Painter of Memories.

Botany

There should be no monotony
In studying your botany;
It helps to train
And spur the brain
Unless you haven't got any.

It teaches you, does botany
To know the plants and spotany,
And learn just why
They live or die
In case you plant or potany.

You learn, from reading botany,
Of wooly plants and cottony
That grow on earth
And what they're worth
And why some spots have notany.

You sketch the plants, in botany,
You learn to chart and plotany
Like corn, or oats.
And jot down notes
If you know how to jotany.

Your time, if you'll allotany
Will teach you how and whatany
Old plant or tree
Can do or be,
And that's the use of botany!

How D'ye Feel

"Corking," said the bottle.
"Rotten," said the apple.
"Punk," said the fire cracker.
"Fine," said the judge.
"First rate," said the postmaster.
"Grand," said the piano.
"Keen," said the knife.
"Ripping," said the trousers.
"All done up," said the shirt.

The political boss has a tilt with the leader of the suffragettes. The boss bribes the “cullud” girl to drug Lester. Eve dreams she has been elected Mayor.

ACT II Eve's dream. Women are making the laws and men are making the beds. “I've been darning stockings like a dutiful husband.” Lester asks his wife for a little money. “What did you do with the dollar and half I gave you last week?” Clarence is insulted by Mrs. McNabb, rescued by Doris Denton, the brave fire chief. Rosalie bribes the Mayor. A “cullud” chief of police. Mrs. McNabb proposes to Clarence. “I still hold the winning card.” A duel for the documents. Saved, Saved!

ACT III Eve still dreams. Clarence's wedding day. Mike demands the ballot for men. The elopment of Clarence. “Officer, do your duty.” Her honor the Mayor is arrested. Eve awakes.

Music Department

Mention should also be made of the music work in the grades. Stress has been placed not only upon good singing but also upon good listening to the finest types of music. Grade and high school teams entered the county music achievement contest which is a test in the art of listening.

A rhythm band is being developed in the primary grades which will prove a very definite incentive toward fostering an interest in band and orchestra work when the children have reached an age where they can take up the study of some musical instrument.

A fine group of sixth and seventh grade girls have done some two-part singing at the county institute which has made the school proud to claim them. They give promise of making a splendid glee club in a short time. There is also a group of boys in these two grades who do fine work in singing.

Surely no more wholesome interest can be cultivated than this!

Girls' Glee Club

"And Music too, dear Music! That can touch
Beyond all else the soul that loves it much—
Now heard far off—so far as but to seem
Like the faint, exquisite music of a dream."

The Girls' Glee Club was organized this year again with most of its old members back, and quite a few new ones. The Glee Club sang at the Christmas program for the school and also at several Parent-Teachers' meetings. A quartette from the Glee Club representing our school sang at the Teachers' Institute.

The Glee Club, along with their instructor, Miss Brevier, enjoyed a wiener and marshmallow roast in the fall after which they serenaded the town. They also went caroling a few evenings before Christmas. We appreciate the interest others have shown in our work. We ourselves have had a very enjoyable and interesting year.

Band and Orchestra

Through the interest of our county superintendent, Mr. W. L. Adams, and the cooperation of the trustees and principals of five consolidated schools, a more extensive and intensive development of a county instrumental music program has been started this year under the leadership of Mr. R. M. Stark. Mr. Stark works one day each week in the Wakarusa, New Paris, Jamestown, Bristol, and Millersburg schools. The instruments necessary in forming fairly well balanced bands have been furnished and given out to students showing special interest and a disposition to make the best of their opportunities. Only a small fee of $1.50 per year instrumental up-keep has been charged these students.

Wakarusa is splendidly represented in the county band of ninety pieces which rehearses once each week at Goshen by about twenty-five students. The county orchestra contains also a fine group of our players. The number is constantly increasing. We have the honor of having the pianist for the county orchestra chosen from the Wakarusa group.

Concerts are being given by the county organizations as benefits for the purpose of procuring enough funds to purchase black and gold uniforms for the bands.

Music has been furnished for a number of programs throughout the year by small groups chosen from the entire band as well as the large group itself. Our saxophone quartette deserves commendation for its good work.

ATHLETICS

F.C. Blecher

The Athletic Association

IN THE early part of year a meeting was held for the purpose of organizing an Athletic Association. For officers the following were elected: Harold Pletcher, president; Glenwood Harrington, vice-president; Mary Longenecker, secretary and treasurer. The association's primary purpose was to instill an interest in the athletic activities of our school. Also the association emphasized the principles of sportmanship, teamwork, obedience to training rules, and a friendly rivalry between our neighboring schools. The dues of the association were used to pay for supplies used by the students at noons and also part of the money was donated for a suit for a cheerleader which was bought by the Howling Hundred Club and the Athletic Association.

Honor sweaters were awarded to the graduating Seniors for playing in more than half of the games in any one sport for one year or more. For each year on the team in any one sport, a stripe is placed on the sleeve of the sweater.

The following Seniors received honor sweaters in the mentioned sports: Basket ball, Pearl Hahn, three stripes; Mary Longenecker, three stripes; Harold Pletcher, two stripes; baseball, Harley Stump, four stripes; Gerald Hunsberger, four stripes; Harry Hostetler, two stripes; track, Myron Weldy, two stripes.

Letters are given to the undergraduates for playing in half of the year's games on any first team. The following received letters: Baseball, Harley Stump, Russell Hunsberger, Harold Pletcher, Paul Leinbach, Marvin Mullet, Floyd Eby, Lowell Sloat; basket ball, Harold Pletcher, Claude Robinson, Glenwood Harrington, Russell Hunsberger, Walter Hartman, Henry Copenhaver, Calvin Mishler.

Basket Ball

At the first call for basket ball practice twenty-four prospects reported. These were divided into two squads: The one squad composing the first team and the other the second team. The first seven weeks of practice were used to teach the fundamentals of basket ball. This was dull for the players but proved very beneficial.

Since there were only two regulars of last year's team from which to build up our squad, and because of sickness of some of the players it was rather hard to get started on the first of the schedule. The third game of the season was the first of our victories, and the team succeeded in securing six others in the regular schedule and one victory in the tournament, this making a total of eight victories and twelve games lost.

The team also had the misfortune of receiving the "Consolation Brick" but they got rid of it in the third game after receiving it, by "donating" it to Lakeville to the tune of 25-5. Prospects are very good for next year, because only two players are lost from either squad.

Something to think about: "One sad angle to the Wakarusa story is the fact they are not backed by their townspeople, who are too interested in their independent teams to give the high school boys due credit for their efforts. The citizens of Wakarusa have been fortunate in having two strong independent net teams for the past several years and have been hosts to the independent tourney for two years, which tends to withdraw the interest toward high school activities on the hardwood."

The Howling Hundred Club

The Howling Hundred Club was organized by electing: President, Gerald Hunsberger; Secretary-Treasurer, Pearl Hahn, and Sergeant-at-Arms, Harold Pletcher. A constitution and by-laws were adopted by the Seniors who are the originators of the club. The purpose of the club is to have more "pep" and "yelling" at games. The following amendments were adopted: First—that officers be taken out of the Seniors should be charter members. The Howling Hundred led the parade through town just before the Nappanee-Wakarusa game and participate in the yells which the school gave for advertising and boosting the game.

Claude Robinson and Harley Stump were appointed as a reception committee to the visiting team. Harley Stump acted as official yell leader. The Howling Hundred Club was represented at each game.

Tennis

The Wakarusa High School can boast of one of the finest athletic fields in this section. The tennis courts, of which there are two in number, are of the kind that very few of the smaller and few of the larger schools are able to boast. This is the first year for the courts and quite a lot of work was necessary in order to get them in shape to play on during the latter part of the fall.

Wakarusa High School now has a tennis team. Although tennis is comparatively a new recreation as far as the school is concerned, several boys showed themselves as prospects worthy of representing this school on the courts.

The tennis squad was composed of Claude Robinson, Ford Yoder, Cecil Weaver, and Howard Robison. These boys played in the only two competitive matches that were scheduled, those with Goshen High School. Robinson, ranking number one on the Wakarusa team, handily defeated his opponent on each occasion. Yoder, who seemed to have a mania for deuced sets, always forced his man into extra game sets and extra set matches. Weaver and Robison lost to their opponents, but only after hard struggles.

As a curtain to the tennis season in the school, a singles and doubles tournament was held. Robinson defeated Yoder for the singles championship and Yoder and Weaver defeated Robinson and Robison for the doubles championship.

Next year should find Wakarusa represented with a tennis team that can uphold the purple and gold in fine shape.

First Round

Wakarusa	18	Millersburg	17

Semi-finals

Wakarusa	10	Goshen	39
----------------	----	--------------	----

Some of the Outstanding Games

Millersburg-Wakarusa. This game was outstanding, because Wakarusa only had five first string men to play the game. The team was composed of R. Hunsberger, Hartman, Harrington, Pletcher, and Mishler. Wakarusa lead in the score 12-16 with but nine minutes to go, when Hunsberger left the game of four fouls. In the next nine minutes Millersburg made nine points.

Madison-Wakarusa. Wakarusa took the lead in this game and held a five point lead with but two minutes to play. Then two of the men left the game with four fouls. Madison made two long shots and gave Wakarusa the consolation brick with a score of 20-21.

Lakeville-Wakarusa. Wakarusa gave the brick to Lakeville on their own floor by a score of 25-6.

Wakarusa-Middlebury. Wakarusa played classy ball to beat Middlebury by a score of 34-23.

Wakarusa-Madison. Wakarusa played an excellent game to the end winning the game with a score of 28-20.

SECTIONAL TOURNAMENT

Wakarusa again went to the semi-finals. Their way to the semi-finals was not an easy road this year, because they met Millersburg. The score of the first half of the game was 13-7 in favor of Wakarusa. The game ended 17-18. The boys played good to win the game. We say, "The better team won."

In the semi-finals Wakarusa was eliminated by the sectional champs 39-10. The score for the last half was 12-7 in favor of Goshen. The boys played good ball for the last half.

TRACK

Wakarusa is very fortunate in having a good mile track. Only two schools in the county, Goshen and Elkhart, have better tracks.

Last year Wakarusa had a successful season in track. There were two meets held. A triangular meet at Wakarusa between Bremen, Wakarusa, and Nappanee, and a four school meet at Lakeville, Madison, North Liberty, and Wakarusa competed.

Nappanee took the Wakarusa meet.

Robison took first in high-jump, and third in broad-jump.

Doering took second in broad-jump, and tried for third in pole vaulting.

Pletcher took second in broad-jump.

Leinbach took second in the half-mile relay.

Wakarusa took the Lakeville meet with a total of 91 points.

North Liberty had 36 points and Lakeville 24 points.

Robison took first in pole-vault, first in broad-jump, first in shot put, first in 220-yd. dash, second in 100-yd. dash.

Doering took first in high-jump, second in pole-vault, second in broad-jump.

Mishler took first in 100-yd. dash, third in 220-yd. dash, first in 50-yd. dash.

Leinbach took first in 440-yd. dash, first in the half-mile.

Pletcher took third in broad-jump.

Weldy took third in 880, third in 440-yd. dash.

Benedict took second in 50-yd. dash, third in 100 yd. dash.

Beulah Werner took first in 50-yd. dash.

Virginia Green took first in baseball throwing.

We have most of our last year's men to round out a good track team for this year. There will probably be three track meets this year.

Baseball Team

We are glad to say this has been the most successful High School baseball season since 1915. This also shows that we have good material for a team if it is only tried out and given a chance. We hope that by the showing this team has made, more of the high school boys will take an interest in it.

The Tribune writes:

"The boys of this season played nine games in five weeks and won six out of the nine games. They lost one to Nappanee and two to New Paris. They won one game from Nappanee, one from Jamestown, two from Madison, and two from Bristol. Stump pitched a wonderful season of baseball. He struck out eighty men in nine seven-inning games and pitched one no-hit, no-run game against Bristol. He held Nappanee to two hits and New Paris to one hit.

"The boys deserve success, because they put forth every effort into the practice and games. Success comes through cooperation and the boys did fine."

Our girls played a season of ill-luck, due to the fact that we, so far, haven't had sufficient time to spend with them in practice and principles.

Pearl Hahn (Robinson), our center, played a good season and out-jumped most of the centers which we opposed.

Irma Shank, our swift run-center, will be back with the school next year.

Mary Longenecker, our star forward, did well and it took the best of the guards to guard her.

Treva Enders played a good game as forward and proved her stuff. She will be back again next year.

Laura Yoder, our first substitute. She played nearly as much as any of the other

Hazel Hahn, half of our never decreasing defense, will be back with us next year.

Ethel Kauffman, our other half of the defense, we must give these guards credit because they really did fine.

This is the first year that the High School coach has taken charge of coaching the grade teams. The purpose of this is to teach the grade boys the fundamentals of basket ball, passing, pivoting, front-turns, and reverse-turns, dribbling, free-throwing, and basket shooting. The purpose of this is when they get into High School they will develop with more rapidity. They have also been taught the same center plays, floor plays, and out-of-bound plays that the High School teams are using. Their early season's record was sacrificed to teach them the fundamental principles of basket ball.

The grade team's record has been somewhat handicapped, because most of the teams which they have met this year have been of much larger boys than themselves.

County Grade Tournament at Bristol

First round	Wakarusa	12	New Paris	10
Semi-finals	Wakarusa	9	Dunlaps	8
Finals	Wakarusa	7	Bethany	18

Last year was the first year that any Wakarusa school team won any first game in any tournament, and this year our grade team surpassed last year's high school team's record by winning their way into the finals.

Pletcher, Stiver, Renner, Hughes, Hahn, Green, Eby, and Jewell represented the Wakarusa grades at the county grade tournament at Bristol.

They met New Paris in the first game. The score was 8 to 2 in favor of New Paris at the half. Wakarusa came back strong for the last half and won 12 to 10. Renner made all of Wakarusa's points.

In the semi-finals they met and defeated Dunlaps 8 to 9 in a thrilling over-time game. Eby made the free throw in the over-time period and then Wakarusa stalled time beautifully for the remaining two minutes.

In the final game they met Bethany and were defeated 7 to 18. Our boys set up a real game until Renner was retired on four fouls. The score at the first quarter was 4 to 1 in favor of Wakarusa, and at the half it was 6 to 7 in favor of Bethany.

On the first tip-off at the beginning of the half, Renner committed his fourth foul. Then Wakarusa lost hope and also the last game.

Pletcher was given the floor guard position on the all county team for his cool headed plays.

Life's Balance

The mill will never grind with the water that's past
Nor when the iron's cooled, can we alter the cast,
Nor will winter go by without spending its blasts,
Nor will we live any longer, by living so fast.

There's no gathering of roses without the pricks of its thorn
There's no life hereafter, unless again ye be born;
There's no loss in this world, but has an off-setting gain,
And bright sunny days follow after the rain.

There's no slipping or falling without an ultimate rise,
There's no end to achievement, for the person who tries,
There are fortunes awaiting the person who cares,
The one who n'er stops,— the person who dares.

There's no idleness now, for those who would live on,
Those who count Life's moments now, not the time that is gone,
There are things worth the doing, and doing them well,
And there's a lifetime to work in, e'er Death tolls its knell.

At our birth we receive the best of the past,
And we live our life through;—what do we leave at the last?
Have we raised or lowered the standard of life?
Have we faced problems squarely, and won through the strife?

Do we, with our learning and knowledge today,
See life still more clearly,— comprehend in a way
The mysteries God put here at creation's dawn,—
That have been here, unknown, though the centuries are gone.

—K. E. Sipe.

Poor Lizzie

Virgil Weldy arriving at school one cold morning decided to warm his Ford up a little, so he covered it up and went into the schoolhouse for a few minutes. When he returned he was very much astonished to see his Ford bumped up against an electric pole in front of the school yard. Walking over to it, he said in a very disgusted manner, "What in the dickens are you doing over here?"

To this the Ford replied, in Ford language, "Well since you got the new Chrysler, you bump and jam me around and won't let me go along with you in the evening, so I thought I'd go alone."

Contents of a note found in the waste paper basket. Due to the serious nature of the note we refrain from publishing any names.

1st Girl: Are you trying to make yourself pretty so you can flirt with that fellow? Don't you want my compact, too?

2nd Girl: No, thanks.

1st Girl: Now, don't you think he is cute and he has such nice blonde hair.

2nd Girl: Didn't I tell you that dark hair was prettier than blonde hair? You yourself must think he's cute the way you act.

1st Girl: You know very well I don't admire blonde hair unless it is curly. All my fellows have dark hair and all of them have blue eyes. Don't kid me, I know you have an awful crush on him already. Ta, Ta, old dear.

2nd Girl: You mean thing, you know very well that you're lying. Well, let's not quarrel. Anyway you can have him as far as I'm concerned.

Mr. Sipe: "Is it dangerous to drive with one hand?"

Harley S. "You bet. More than one fellow has run into a church doing it."

Wonders seen on a city street—a long skirt.

We Wonder What She Said

Mr. Sipe, one of our honorable teachers, who had faithfully taught school all week, rushed into the station at eleven o'clock Friday night to purchase a ticket for home.

"You are just in time," said the station agent, "There is only one berth left and this is the last train out." At this moment an old lady came in and wanted to buy a ticket. Mr. Sipe offered her his ticket, which she readily accepted.

Mr. Sipe then sent a telegram home to his wife which was worded as the following: "I will not be home tonight just gave berth to an old woman."

Rah! Rah! Rah! Who are we?

Why, we're the Staff of the "Wakadee."

Mr. Jennings, in Physics: "What is space, Albert?"

Albert: "Space, space, let's see, space, I can't explain it in words but I have it in my head."

Mr. Jennings: "I think you have, too."

Dorothy Dix says that a man is vainer than a woman, but you've got to show me the man who looks into the mirror before answering the telephone.

Mr. Gerber, in one of his classes: "Who can give me a good example of wasted energy?"

Myron W.: "Telling you a hair-raising story."

The "Wakadee" is a great invention—
The school gets all the fame,
The printer gets our money,
And the staff gets all the blame.

Mr. Gerber: "Every boy in this school has a chance to become President of the United States."

Paul S.: "I'll sell my chance for a dime."

Harley Stump: "What a smooth gear-shift you have on your car."

Mary Lo.: "Hey, will you take your hand off my knee?"

Teacher: "Give me a sentence with the word 'Analyze'."

Freshman: "My sister Anna says she never makes love, but oh, how Analyze."

On the Defensive

"If a man smashed a clock could he be convicted of killing time?"

"Not if the clock struck first."

Simple Problem

Mathematics Instructor: "What do we mean when we say that the whole is greater than any of its parts?"

Chet H.: "One of my Aunt's doughnuts."

Blow your horn as often as desired, but don't get conceited and try to give a whole concert. Use a muffler at all times.

Gerald H.: "They are having a bargain sale at the post-office today."

Harley S.: "How's that?"

Gerald H.: "You can get a five dollar money order for three cents."
